

The Summer Olympics in Rio de Janeiro are going to be a major event, however, the bad guys are going to exploit this with a multitude of scams at the same time. Anything you receive in email, text, or even voice mail, you should look at with a healthy dose of skepticism, and ask yourself: "Could this be a scam?" Here are six examples but the possibilities for scams are endless: Emails with DOC or PDF attachments related to tickets or other special offers related to Rio.

*Advertising banners on websites that are poisoned and infect your workstation
Scam phone calls trying to sell you Rio-related travel or even products
Links to controversial Rio-related videos
Claims that the whole event will be moved because of the Zika virus
Complete fake websites which claim they will sell you cheap tickets to the event.*

*So remember, anything to do with the Olympics in Rio the coming months...
Think Before You Click!*